

Table of Contents

1	Why do Research on Families and Children?	1
1.1	Introduction	1
1.2	Stages of Social Research	5
1.3	How is Research on Families and Children Different?	12
1.3.1	Families as Systems of Individuals	13
1.3.2	Defining the Family as Problematic	14
1.3.3	Family Members Occupy Multiple Roles and Statuses Simultaneously	14
1.3.4	Behavioral Secrecy within a Family	15
1.3.5	Preconception about the Family and the Family Life	16
1.4	Benefits to be Derived from a Well-conducted Research	17
1.5	References	17

2	The Ethics of Research on Families and Children	18
2.1	Introduction	18
2.2	Milgram's Obedience Experiment	19
2.3	Impact on Children and Family Members	21
2.4	Special Concerns in Case of Children	22
2.4.1	Informed Consent and Rights of Children	24
2.4.2	Non-harmful Experimental Procedures	24
2.4.3	Additional Consent	25
2.4.4	Incentive	25
2.4.5	Deception	26
2.4.6	Sharing of Responsibilities	26
2.4.7	Anonymity	26
2.4.8	Keeping Parents in the Loop in case of Jeopardy	27
2.4.9	Tackling Unforeseen Circumstances	27
2.4.10	Confidentiality	27
2.4.11	Communication with Participants	28
2.4.12	Exercising Caution while Conveying the Findings	28
2.4.13	Awareness of Implications of Findings	28
2.4.14	Scientific Misconduct	29
2.4.15	Personal Misconduct	29
2.5	Role of Institutional Review Board	29
2.6	Value of Ethically Sound Research in Tackling Fraud	32
2.6.1	Research without Informed Consent	32
2.6.2	Issue Related to the Privacy of Participants	33
2.6.3	Non-treated Controls	34
2.7	Summary	34
2.8	References	35
3	Causal Inference in Research of Families and Children	36
3.1	Variables	36
3.1.1	Types of Research Variables	38
3.2	Units of Analysis	41
3.2.1	The Importance of Units of Analysis	42
3.2.2	Distinction between Units of Analysis and Variables	43
3.3	Thinking Causally	44
3.3.1	Temporal Precedence	45

3.3.2	Non-spuriousness	45
3.3.3	Constant Conjunctions	46
3.3.4	Identifying Mechanism and Specifying Context	46
3.3.5	Assessing Causality	47
3.4	Framing the Hypothesis	48
3.4.1	Directional Hypothesis	49
3.4.2	Non-directional Hypothesis	49
3.4.3	Cross-sectional Design	50
3.4.4	Longitudinal Study	51
3.5	Casual Inference in Qualitative Research	52
3.6	Conclusion	52
3.7	References	53
4	Searching and Reading Literature	54
4.1	Reading a Journal Article	54
4.1.1	Steps of Reading a Journal Article	55
4.1.2	How to have a Contextual Understanding of a Journal Article?	55
4.1.3	Approaches of Reading a Journal Article	56
4.1.4	Types of Journal Articles	57
4.1.5	Gathering a Practical Experience	58
4.2	Where do I go from Here	58
4.3	How do Journal Articles get Published	59
4.4	Steps of Publishing a Journal Article	61
4.4.1	Selecting a Journal	61
4.4.2	Preparing a Manuscript	62
4.4.3	Proofreading the Manuscript	63
4.4.4	Selecting a Reviewer (Optional)	63
4.4.5	Taking Account of Reviews	64
4.4.6	Tips to Handle the R&R	65
4.4.7	Finalizing the Article for Publishing	67
4.5	Research Monographs	68
4.6	Edited Volumes	68
4.6.1	An Editor's Role	69
4.6.2	Responsibilities of the Authors (Contributors)	70
4.7	Other Types of Publications	70
4.8	References	71

5	Sampling Issues	72
5.1	Samples and Sampling	72
5.1.1	Differences between Population and a Sample	73
5.1.2	Stage of Sampling	75
5.2	Defining the Population	77
5.3	Sampling Designs	78
5.3.1	Features or Characteristics of a Good Sampling Design	78
5.3.2	Types of Sample Design	78
5.4	Bias in Sampling	83
5.5	How Large a Sample should be?	83
5.6	Formula for Calculating the Sample Size	85
5.7	Steps Involved in Choosing the Sampling Technique	85
5.8	Choosing a Sampling Technique	88
5.9	Summary	88
5.10	References	89
6	How Do We Measure Concepts?	90
6.1	Introduction	90
6.2	Concept of Human Development	91
6.3	Characteristics of a Good Measurement Procedure	93
6.3.1	Measurement of HDI by Planning Commission Method	97
6.3.2	What are the Reliability and Validity of HDI?	101
7	Studying Families: Methods for Quantitative Data	104
7.1	Introduction	104
7.2	Studying Families: Through Experiments	105
7.2.1	Internal Validity	105
7.2.2	External Validity	107
7.3	Studying Families through Survey Methods	109
7.3.1	Questionnaires	109
7.3.2	Mailed Questionnaire	110
7.3.3	Telephone Interview	111
7.3.4	Time Diary Methods	112
7.4	Studying Families through Non-reactive Techniques	112
7.4.1	Four Kinds of Errors Introduced by the Respondents	112

7.4.2	Three Kinds of Errors Introduced by the Researcher	114
7.5	Types of Non-reactive Research	114
7.5.1	Archives	115
7.5.2	Observations	115
7.5.3	Physical Traces	116
7.6	Ethics and Quantitative Methods	118
7.7	Limitations of Quantitative Data	122
7.8	Conclusion	123
7.9	References	124
8	Studying Families: Methods for Qualitative Data	125
8.1	Introduction	125
8.2	Qualitative Research Compared to Quantitative Research	126
8.2.1	Qualitative Research	126
8.2.2	Quantitative Research	127
8.2.3	Points of Distinctions between Qualitative Research and Quantitative Research	128
8.3	Types of Qualitative Research Strategies	130
8.3.1	Strategy 1: Data Collection under Qualitative Research	130
8.3.2	Strategy 2: Data Analysing	132
8.3.3	Strategy 3: Data implementation: A Combination of Data Collection and Data Analysis	133
8.4	Studying Families through Observation	135
8.4.1	Methods of Studying Families through Observation	135
8.4.2	Benefits of Observation Research	136
8.5	Ethics and Qualitative Research	137
8.5.1	Importance of Ethics in Research	137
8.5.2	Qualitative Research Ethics	138
8.5.3	Principles/Guidelines for Qualitative Research Ethics	138
8.5.4	Challenges for Ethical Qualitative Research	141
8.6	Evaluating Qualitative Research	143
8.6.1	Criteria for Evaluating Qualitative Research	143

8.7	Conclusion	145
8.8	References	145
9	Studying Families: Mixed Methods	146
9.1	Introduction	146
9.2	Mixed Method Approaches	147
9.2.1	Explanatory Mixed Method Design	150
9.2.2	Exploratory Mixed Model Design	150
9.2.3	Triangulation Mixed Model Design	151
9.2.4	Embedded Mixed Model Design	153
9.2.5	How to Time Mixed Method Research Approaches?	156
9.2.6	Priorities in Mixed Method Approaches	156
9.2.7	How to Mix in a Mixed Model Approach?	157
9.2.8	Issues with Procedures of Mixing Qualitative and Quantitative Data	157
9.3	Mixed Model Studies	159
9.3.1	Definition of Mixed Method Research	161
9.3.2	Mixed Method Design: Advantages and Disadvantages	162
9.4	Closing Thoughts on Choosing a Research Method	163
9.5	References	165
10	Analyzing Data on Families and Children	166
10.1	Introduction	166
10.2	Descriptive Statistics	167
10.2.1	Central Tendency	167
10.2.2	Variability	168
10.3	Inferential Statistics	169
10.3.1	Hypothesis Testing	170
10.3.2	Probability	171
10.3.3	Sampling Distribution	172
10.4	Decision Making Problem	172
10.4.1	Correct Decision	173
10.4.2	Type I and II Error	173
10.4.3	Selection of Significance Level	174
10.5	Interpretation of the Result of Insignificance	174
10.6	Statistical Tests	176

10.6.1	The t-test	176
10.6.2	The F Statistics	178
10.6.3	Correlation Coefficient	179
10.7	Correlational Method	182
10.7.1	Effect Size	182
10.7.2	Advanced Correlational Methods	182
10.7.3	Regression Equation	183
10.7.4	Multiple Correlation	183
10.8	References	184
11	Advanced Topics in Family Data Analysis	185
11.1	Ideas of Nested Entities	185
11.2	Analyzing Nested Data	186
11.2.1	Stable Group Models	187
11.2.2	Dynamic Group Models	188
11.3	Individual Change Over Time	191
11.4	Contextual Factors: Moderators and Mediators	193
11.4.1	Context Which can also be Multifaceted Variable	193
11.5	Final Thoughts on Nested Interests	196
11.5.1	Central Theme with a Nested Story	196
11.6	References	199
12	Evaluating Programs in Human Development and Family Science	200
12.1	Introduction	200
12.2	Needs Assessment and Social Impact Assessment	201
12.2.1	Needs Assessment	201
12.2.2	Social Impact Assessment (SIA)	203
12.2.3	Criticism Leveled Against the Social Impact Assessment and Needs Assessment Framework	204
12.3	Outcome Assessment	205
12.4	Process Research: How does it Work?	206
12.5	Some Thoughts about Randomization in Evaluation Research	208
12.5.1	Types of Evaluation	208
12.6	The Relationship between Applied and Basic Research	211
12.6.1	Applied Research	211
12.6.2	Basic Research	212

12.6.3	Points of Distinction between Applied Research and Basic Research	212
12.7	Conclusion	216
12.8	References	217
13	Politics of Research on Families and Children	218
13.1	Introduction	218
13.2	Ethical Implications of Research on Families and Children	219
13.2	Institutional Review of Research	222
13.3	Distinctive Issues a Researcher might face while Working with Subjects who are Children	223
13.3.1	Issues Regarding Confidentiality and Privacy	224
13.3.2	Issues of Non-treated Controls	225
13.4	Political Concerns while Conducting Research	226
13.4.1	Funding	227
13.4.2	The Discipline in which the People are Working	229
13.4.3	Hierarchal Structures	229
13.5	Political Control of the Journals where Research Work is Published	230
13.5.1	Corruption in Academia	230
13.6	Concluding Thoughts on the Ethical and Political Concerns of Research Work	232
	Index	234